

The logo for the Utah Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Wildlife Resources. It features a stylized mountain range silhouette in the background. In the foreground, there is a silhouette of a deer head with large antlers. The text "UTAH" is at the top, "DNR" is in the center, and "WILDLIFE RESOURCES" is at the bottom, all in a bold, sans-serif font. The logo is set against a white background with a red border.

This topographic map depicts the Wasatch-Cache National Monument and surrounding regions in Utah. The map is characterized by a grid system with the 1st Standard Parallel North running horizontally across the upper portion. A prominent red line traces a path through the landscape, likely representing a major trail or boundary. Key geographical features include the Wasatch Mountains to the east, the Snake River to the west, and several reservoirs such as Lake Powell, Lake Powell, and Lake Powell. Towns and settlements shown include Morgan, Hatch, Cannonville, Henrieville, and Alton. The map also displays various peaks, including Mount Wilson and Mount Watson, and the 1st Standard Parallel North. The map is a detailed representation of the terrain, with contour lines indicating elevation and various labels for geographical features.
